HOW THEY SPEND SUNDAY.

The Commercial Travelers as Church-Goers-Music and Good Sermons Please Them.

Indianapolis is becoming a popular Sunday haven for commercial travelers. "You will hardly believe it," said a well-known hotel clerk, "but we have a good many commercial men who come over from Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati to pass Sunday with us in preference to remaining in those cities for their day of rest. I don't know why they do so, unless it is that we make them more comfortable here than they do there. Some of them are good enough to tell us that they obtain better hotel accommodations in Indianapolis than they do anywhere else in the country. That may account for the fact of this city getting its full share of their Sunday patronage when they are free to some extent to choose where they wil stop over. Anyhow, a good many of them come here on that day and give Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago the go-by in order to do

"What is the average commercial traveler's method of putting in the day?"

"Quite a number of them that come under my observation go to church in the morning—the Catholics nearly all do, and I should say about half of the others. A few have some particular church they want to attend, but the majority of the church-goers simply ask us to direct them to some place where they 'can hear some good music and a good sermon.' The Catholics generally go to early mass and attend to their correspondence afterward, and the non-church goers put in the time while the others are in church writing letters. It is a great day mong them for epistolary transactions and between letter-writing, church-going, eating, smoking and sleeping the majority of them make a comfortable day of it. Of course, if the weather is pleasant there is the same chance for walking and riding here that there is anywhere, but as a rule the men that work hard on the road for six days are willing to take things easy on the seventh, and do a good deal of sitting 'Tound.'"

"To what church do most of the outside traveling men gof"

"I believe Dr. Haines, at the First Presbyterian, captures the most of them. You see that was President Harrison's church when he lived here, and many of the traveling men who wanted to see him, and did not want to take up his time calling at his house, used to go to that church on Sunday mornings to get a glimpse of the Republican presidential candidate. In that way they got to feel at home there, and conthey got to feel at home there, and continue to attend that church when they are in the city. Plymouth Church has a good share of them, and others have special attractions for particular classes. As a rule, the merchant travelers are very liberal in their theological views, and are ready to go where the exercises are likely to prove interesting."

EDWARD HAWKINS'S AMBITION.

He and His Friends Propose to Establish Carpet-Bag Politics for the City Election.

Although it is six months before the city election will be held, considerable gossip about candidates and the probable result of the contest is in circulation. The latest bit in Democratic circles is to the effect that ex-United States Marshal Ed Hawkins is to be made the nominee of the Democratic convention for Mayor. Mr. Hawkins has not yet said that he will be a candidate, but a Democrat who is admitted to the councils of the party says that the exmarshal has consented to make the race. and that the politicians have settled upon him as the man to nominate. Democrats living in Indianapolis for many years, who have had an ambition to be Mayor, are not taking kindly to the Hawkins boom. They cite the fact that his home is at LaPorte, and that he simply had a temporary residence here during the time he was a federal officer. His friends say that he is personally popular, and that he intends to permanently identify himself with the interests of this city. J. B. Curtis would like to have the nomination, but yet he has not received much encouragement, even from his friends, to push his canvass. They fear that his attempt in the Legislature to rob the people of the city of the right of self-government would pre-vent him from receiving the full support of his own party. There may be some significance in the fact that Dr. Edenharter has moved back to the city. After being beaten for Mayor two years ago, he moved to Woodruff Place, where he lived until a few weeks ago. The current belief is that he has returned with the view of working for the nomination the nomination.

It seems to well understood that the Democratic nomination for city clerk will go to Thomas Colbert, until recently a captain on the police force. Captain Colbert has consented to be a candidate, and his friends say there will be but little opposition to him in the convention. However, there are already several other candidates for the nomination announced. The Republicans also have several candidates for the office. John Bowlus, the incumbent, will ask a renomination and election. Al Taffe, who has been a sergeant on the police force for many years, and Charley Miles, the restaurant-keeper, are among those who will strive for the position. pump manufacturer, seems to be about the only person spoken of at present, but it is understood that he has not yet decided to West Indianapolis Politics. The politicians in West Indianapolis are now talking about candidates for town officers, with the friends of each working energetically to obtain advantages in the nominating conventions. The Democrats are disturbed by the conflicting claims of Barney Decker, Gus Schaffer and George Gordon, who want the nomination for marshal. It is thought there will be but little difficulty about the clerkship, as the Democrats are satisfied with Charles Golden, who now has the office. C. Jennings, however, regards his ability and party fealty worthy of equal notice, and proposes to give Mr. Golden a chance to work for renomination. The Republicans mention William Hardy for clerk, Oliver McKinley and Daniel Marshall for treasurer, and John Widdy and Johnson Wallace for trustee. The Republicans will have their convention Wednesday night.

A HIGH-LICENSE LEAGUE.

Candidates for the Next General Assembly to Be Called Upon to Show Where They Stand.

A temperance movement, which has for its purpose a high-license and local-option agitation, and the securing of a law providing for them from the next General Assembly is about to be organized. It has been talked of among quite a number of Indianapolis temperance people for several weeks, and a conference will probably be called this week, when steps will be taken to perfect an organization. It is the intention to make it strictly non-partisan. Democrats also have already signified their willingness to become active in the work proposed, and it is believed that the organization can be equally divided between the two old parties.

"We believe that with an organization, having branches in each county in the State," said one of the projectors of the movement yesterday, "we can elect a majority of the members of the next General Assembly pledged to vote for a high-license and local-option law. We will agree to support no candidate who will not pledge himself to vote for a law fixing the minimum license fee at $500 and the maximum $1,000. The law would also embrace a local-option feature, so that counties, if they so desire it, can prevent the sale of intoxicants altogether. I think such a movement will be successful.

sible. We will say to men of all parties:
'For the other offices you can vote for whom you please, but we want you to support a candidate for the Legislature who will vote for the law we want.'

I believe a majority of the people in every county in the State will join such a movement. When the candijoin such a movement. When the candidates for the Legislature are nominated the organization must get a definite answer from them as to how they stand on the high-license law. In other words, every candidate must be pledged to support the bill before he can receive the vote of the members of the organization, and they, in turn, will be pledged to support the candidate who pledges himself to support the bill, no matter what his politics may be."

"What do you intend to call the new organization?"

"The High-License League of Indiana would be a good name, I think. The idea is not a new one. Such leagues have been organized in other States, and in every one, I believe, they have succeeded in getting what they asked."

The famous St. Louis Brown Stockings. champions of the American Association not only once, but four times, will be here to-day and to-morrow to meet their old rivals, the Hoosiers. The team, which has among its members Latham, Comiskey, O'Neil, Robinson, King, Chamberlain, Fuller and Cudworth, is one of the best in the country, and is capable of playing a great game of ball. There has long been more or less rivalry between the Browns and Captain Glasscock's combination, and those who see the games will know that they are played for all there is in them. The home team will have out its full strength to-day with the exception of Seery, who is not able to play. Meyers will take his place in left field. Boyle and Buckley will be in the box for the Hoosiers, but who will pitch for the visitors is not known. The club cannot reach here until about 3 o'clock, and on that account the game will not be called until 3:45. Brennan and Jose will be the umpires.

MATERIALS FOR A HISTORY.

Some of the Resources Mr. English Uses in Writing His Work on the Progress of Indiana. For some time past Hon. William H. English, of this city, has been gathering material for a history of Indiana. "It is no small undertaking to complete the work as I have planned it," he remarked to a Journal reporteras he sat in his office. The apartment looked more like the operating-room of a photograph gallery than the sanctum of a successful business man, and the reporter business man, and the reporter asked what the array of half finished pictures, proofs and negatives was intended for. "They are the illustrations for my book," was the answer, "and although I have contracts outstanding for more than $10,000 worth of pictures I do not suppose I am more than well started on that branch of the work. I want to include the picture of every public man who has figured in the history of Indiana during the present century, and I will have to go into Illinois after some of them, for you remember Illinois was once a part of the ois after some of them, for you remember Illinois was once a part of the Indiana purchase. They include the territorial officers as well as the State officials, Governors, judges, marshals, members of the various legislatures and constitutional conventions, distinguished soldiers, lawyers, ministers and doctors, everybody in fact whose part in public affairs makes a mention of them desirable in a complete history of Indiana. I get inquiries frequently from people who send me portraits of themselves or their ancestors as to what it will cost to have such engravings inserted in the work, and my invariable reply has been not a cent." I am not trying to make or save money in this undertaking, I keep a man out all the time looking up old portraits and manuscripts, likely to be of service, and thus far have been very successful."

"How are these pictures to be used in the "How are these pictures to be used in the

"They are to be reduced to uniform size and engraved in appropriate groups as far as possible. Here are pages containing the legislatures of various years that will show the general plan to be followed. Every one of these heads has to be photographed over again from the original picture and brought to the proper size before the group is arranged and the full-page engraving made. The work is wonderfully well done considering the char those who will strive for the position.
Other persons are spoken of, but their names have not been authoritatively announced. For Mayor, Edward Dean, the lected are old fashioned daguerreotypes acter of some of the material furnished.
A good many of the original portraits collected are old fashioned daguerreotypes and ambrotypes, so faded that the features are hardly distinguishable, and yet the engravers manage to get satisfactory results from them. Where they make their own photographs and combinations, they do wonderfully good work. Here is an engraving of the Circle, showing the soldiers' graving of the Circle, showing the soldiers' and sailors' monument completed and standing in the center of the plat. It was made from several photographs of the architect's drawings of the monument, and views of sections of the Circle, and yet everything is in its proper place, and precisely as it will look when the monument is finished. Still, the restoration of old pictures and engravings made from them is the most interesting part of the work. Here is a group made from old pictures found among rubbish on the floor of the old State-house, so defaced as to be hardly recognizable, and here is an engraving from an oil painting that had been gnawed from an oil painting that had been gnawed by rate and injured by tight rolling until it was thought to be valueless. I have it was thought to be valueless. I have had a good many valuable documents photographed and engraved in the same way. Here is the attestation clause of the first Constitution of Indiana, with the names of the signers, and I will have other fac-similes of equal value ready for use in the book. Here is the original certificate of membership of Governor Vander Burgh in the Order of the Cincinnati. You notice that the name is divided and a capital B used. Here is other material of a good deal of historical value in the collection, and I was able to show the Legislature from it, some years since, that a mistake had been made in numbering the general assemblies, and that we were making appropriations for the next Legislature, and not for the one sitting; but no attention was paid to correcting the mistake. Wherever I have had illustrations made I have preserved the original pictures, the negatives and the plate, so they might be available for future editions of the work."

"Is the letter-press as far advanced as the interpretation of the work." "Is the letter-press as far advanced as the "Hardly. Still the material has been classified and arranged so that it is readily available. This pile contains biography, and it is so arranged that you can find an account of any public man who has ever been a resident of Indiana, either by looking for the name alphabetically or searching for it until the title of the county from which he came or the body in which he served. The remainder of the matter is in equally good shape and I hope to place some of it in the publishers' hands shortly."

"When is it proposed to issue the book and in what shape?"

"I am not ready to fix any date and cannot say yet whether it will be published in one or two volumes. I have thought of making two volumes of it and dividing it with the adoption of the present Constitution, in 1851. Still, I have not determined as to that, nor as to the "Hardly. Still the material has been not determined as to that, nor as to the method of its publication and circulation. One thing I have made up my mind about, and that is that there shall be two editions of it—one shortly and the other in our centennial year—and the second edition shall be revised, brought up to date, and rewritten, so that it shall be a complete record of ten, so that it shall be a complete record of a century of Indiana's progress. I may not be spared to complete either, but I have provided in my will for the carrying out of my plans, and I can say that the book will accomplish one good result in showing the strength and calibre of the men who laid the foundations and built up the prosperity of Indiana. Whatever may be the shortcomings of their descendants, there were giants in those days."

Mr. English stated that his collection had been drawn upon pretty liberally by publishers of other volumes, and that he had usually granted requests for the use of any material he had, sometimes to his own detriment, but that as his work was so near completion he expected hereafter to keep completion he expected hereafter to keep his papers together until his own volumes were issued.

This Week's Amusements. In spite of the very large advance sale of seats for the Booth-Barrett engagement on Saturday, there are yet excellent seats for all the performances to be had at the boxoffice. Mr. Booth joins his company at Cleveland to-night, completely restored in health, and will certainly play here the latter part of the week. They will give the most beautiful and elaborate production of "Merchant of Venice," on Friday night, ever seen here. At the Saturday matinee "Hamlet will be given, and Saturday night a double bill, "Fool's Revenge" and "Yorick's Love." This will doubtless be the last opportunity theater-goers will have to see Mr. Booth act, and they should avail themselves of it.

Firemen Kept Busy.

The Fire Department answered four calls yesterday afternoon, and with such a high wind blowing, Chief Dougherty congratulates himself that but little damage was done. The first was at Eighth street and the Panhandle yards, where a box car was partly consumed. While returning there was an alarm from No. 70 East Washington street, where a shed worth about $50 was destroyed. Again, before the firemen reached their quarters, there was a call to the lower end of Kentucky avenue, where a pile of burning rubbish had aroused the fears of the watchman in the tower. At 7:30 in the evening a residence at No. 324 South Meridian street, owned by Mrs. J. Wheatley and occupied by Mrs. McCracken, was partially destroyed. The fire originated from a defective flue. The loss was estimated at $300.

The Act of a Miscreant. A passenger on the fast train of the J., M. & I., leaving Louisville at 7:45 Saturday night, said yesterday that it was fired into. just after passing the small station of Vienna. The bullet went through the sleeper Thalia, breaking the two opposite windows, and narrowly missing two passengers. A variation of a hair, and the bullet would have hit one of the passengers, and probably both. The conductor was also in line of danger. The train was not stopped, and as there is no telegraph station at Vienna it is probable that the miscreant will not be apprehended.

Congressman Cox's Visit.

Congressman S. S. Cox, of New York city, registered at the Bates House, yesterday. on his way to Bloomington. He was besieged by reporters, who were anxious to know whether his next lecture on "Why We Laugh" would contain any reference to the recent political revolution, and whether the next census would be able to enumerate the Oklahoma "boomers," but he begged off on the ground that he was tired, and held on to the seclusion that his room at the hotel granted. Mr. Cox goes to Bloomington to try a land suit to-day, and expects to stop at Terre Haute on his return.

favorable, frequently ride over the road on favorable, frequently ride over the road on construction cars—sloop-rigged. "The wind has a good deal to do with railroading even to-day." Mr. Watkins said. "If you go to the bureau of intelligence at the Broadstreet station, Philadelphia, and ask whether some train, say from New York, is likely to be on time, you may be informed that it is likely to be four or five minutes late, because there is a strong wind from the west. Winds make considerable difference in the running time of trains."

THE CHEWING GUM HABIT.

Muscular Paralysis, Poison and Other Dangers Fail to Serve as a Warning to Girls. Baltimore American.

There is danger in chewing gum. There is danger all around. And yet the practice is on the increase. At the present moment it bids fair to become epidemic. It seems, indeed, as though the danger adds additional deed, as though the danger adds additional charm to a custom which, some years ago, was exclusively monopolized by the small boy to the constant annoyance of his teacher. The small girl caught the fever, then the large girl, then the mother, and now it extends throughout all womankind, and even the dudes find the exercise not so exhausting as the pleasure is sweet. Muscular paralysis, squint eyes and lanterned jaws have no terrors. The maid unobservedly pastes her gum on the underside of the piano while she sings a song at the request of her company, and forgetfully leaves it there until a gentleman who follows with a piano solo gets it off with the knee of his trousers. This is rather embarrassing, but the maid chews on as vigorously as ever. The enthusiastic chewing-gum miss sticks it to the headboard of her bed after prayers; finds it flavored with tincture of bedbug in the morning, and still she chews. It may cost her a big doctor's bill to have her jaws straightened out, but even that will not break her of the habit. A most frightful experience was that of a Kentucky lady who laid her gum aside while she prepared a repast of meat and strychnine ror the benefit of some useless curs that were annoying her. Having finished ber task she complemently not the chewing nine ror the benefit of some useless curs that were annoying her. Having finished her task, she complacently put the chewing gum back again into her mouth. It was only with the greatest difficulty that the doctor saved her life from strychnine poisoning, the substance having by carelessness been allowed to come in contact with the gum. And yet it is dollars to cents that the Kentucky lady—who is, by the way, a married woman—chews gum now as vigorously as ever. The moral of all this seems to be that it is best not to indulge, but if you must chew don't save old dulge, but if you must chew don't save old quids, but take a fresh bit every time.
